Abraham Oghobase: "Lost in Transit". Self-Portraits in Berlin

For many years, Goethe-Institut Lagos has been featuring and fostering the internationally acclaimed Lagos photographic scene. Abraham Oghobase - a member of the Black-Box photographic collective which emerged during a workshop at the Institute - is one of the most outstanding up-coming talents. Early in 2008, he spent two month in Berlin. With Lost in Transit, he presents a conceptual series of moving self-portraits which reflect the challenging process of defining ones position in an alien environment. "Anxieties, hope, enthusiasm ... The mind is a function of emotions and thoughts. These feelings are revealed in my sojourn in a foreign land as I subconsciously plug into the social and cultural system - yet confused in my quest to find my place in the landscape of the city, Berlin."
